

The "Do Not Call" List is beneficial to all families who have spent a long day working/going to school and just want to spend the evening together. Before the list, I would be trying to rock my first born to sleep because of tummy troubles, and would literally be interrupted sometimes 5 times in an hour. It's tough enough to make dinner with two little ones who want your attention and they're the ones who have the right to deserve that attention; not some stranger trying to sell me something that doesn't apply to me anyway. It's bad enough that in this day and age, family time suffers. There is always somebody trying to infringe on your personal time. What do I want to spend it doing? Hmmm...spending time with my children and husband that I haven't seen all day or with somebody I don't know trying to sell me something I don't need? NOBODY has the right to harass you and if this law is under attack it just goes to show that the government needs a real wake up call as to what should be important to American families.
